Waking from a deep sleep amongst thick bedding, enjoy a traditional Italian breakfast or 'colazione' of fresh espresso, orange juice and warm pastries after an invigorating hot shower.

As the sun rises over the pine forests, you have the luxury of a whole day in front of you. Do you take a hike through the natural splendour of the valley, accompanied by a guide, who will explain the history and heritage of the place, or will you relax and unwind at the resort spa?

Whatever you decide, skiing in Prageleto is the real draw. Helped by professional instructors, or perhaps left to your own devices, you will be able to enjoy the stunning skiing on offer in the Italian Alps, gliding down the crisp white slopes at your own pace, kitted out with top-of-the-range equipment.

The winter wonderland of Northern Italy can be experienced in no better way; spend your holiday enjoying the dazzling sun on your back and the crunch of fresh snow underfoot, whizzing past the pine trees.

After a day spent honing your skills, delicious freshly cooked Italian food with a regional flavour can be found at the onsite restaurants, or you might like to take your time with a warming glass of red wine and a good book at La Dolce Vita lounge bar. Maybe you'll even opt for a fun-filled evening of laughter at the resort nightclub, dancing the night away with friends?

For those who would like to spend quiet time with their families, there can be no better place than the warm embrace of your own private living room, cuddling up in thick jumpers and lovely woollen slippers. Whatever your preference, Prageleto is certainly one of Italy's frozen delights.
