

Customers about using travel service providers when planning a golf vacation

Golf travel in particular tends to be expensive and requires not only arranging for accommodations and transportation, but also tee times and other details (e.g., lessons, carts, etc...). A good travel agent can help reduce the costs by offering golf packages (accommodation and tee time combinations that save money over these services being purchased separately), and can help golfers choose the right destination to suit their interests and those of their travel companions ...
