

Management of tourism destinations

Managing tourism destinations is an important part of controlling tourism's environmental impacts. Destination management can include land use planning, business permits and zoning controls, environmental and other regulations, business association initiatives, and a host of other techniques to shape the development and daily operation of tourism-related activities...

Date: 2007-05-28

Article link:

<https://www.tourism-review.com/travel-tourism-magazine-management-of-tourism-destinations-article-207>