

IS RISE IN TOURISM HELPING ANTARCTICA OR HURTING IT?

Adélie penguins have been breeding on Antarctica's Torgersen Island for thousands of years, but today the clacking and squawking of 20,000 birds hides a relatively new sound: camera shutters. A dozen tourists wander through the colony, having arrived by Zodiac rubber raft from their cruise ship.

Date: 2007-08-27

Article link:

<http://www.tourism-review.com/travel-tourism-magazine-is-rise-in-tourism-helping-antarctica-or-hurting-it-article263>