

Infamous Court to be Turned into Hotel

Northern Ireland's most infamous courthouse could be reopened as a luxury hotel. Planning permission is being sought to transform the Crumlin Road courthouse in Belfast, which closed nine years ago, in a L25 million project which could create more than 200 jobs. Barry Gilligan, the developer heading the scheme, said: "It offers an excellent opportunity for luxury hotel operators to get into the burgeoning Northern Ireland business and tourism marketplace in an absolutely unique building."

Date: 2007-09-24

Article link:

<http://www.tourism-review.com/travel-tourism-magazine-infamous-court-to-be-turned-into-hotel-article288>