Flores, Indonesia - Kelimutu Volcano

The centre region of Flores Island in Indonesia is where the Kelimutu Volcano is located. It is well known for the 3 crater lakes that are found at the summit. The lakes turn various colors due to the chemical components that are from the underlying volcanic activity. These colors can include: black, red, blue, green.

The mysterious elements of these lakes still thrill geologists. For the average person, these lakes provide them with an extraordinary view of water that they have never seen anything similar to. They can be seen on a flight from Bangkok to Sydney. However, most of the commercial airlines have to fly at an altitude that hinders the true beauty of the lakes. By chartering a private jet, there is the opportunity to see them at a lower elevation. The changes in color also mean that if you see them more than once, it can be a difference experience for you each time!

Even though you see this with your own eyes, it is still hard to believe what is right in front of you.

This is located at Talbot Bay and the entire area is very nice to look at from the air. The charter can also be set up to take you to a low altitude where you can view the sight much closer. This is a must see if you happen to be flying from Singapore to Sydney or vice versa.

Dubai, UAE - The Palm Jumeirah

Even though the Palm Jumeirah in Dubai is man-made, it is still quite a breath taking sight. It was created using sand (94 million cubic metres) and rock (7 million tons)! The area is very impressive when you see it on land but it will blow you away when you get an aerial view. This is when the full size as well as the symmetrical elements can be fully appreciated.
