Together they add up to more than 9,000 tourists, most of whom are expected to go ashore.

According to the figures, every person who disembarks from a cruise ship to visit the country spends an average of 79 to 80 dollars on souvenirs.

There are also revenues for the Honduran tourism industry from sightseeing tours, recreational activities, bars and restaurants. According to the projections, the months of greatest activity in the cruise ship category are February, March, November, and December.
