

THE BEST AND WORST AIRPORTS WORLDWIDE REVEALED

According to a recent survey by AirHelp, which has been ranking airlines for years, the list of the world's best airports is topped by Singapore's Changi airport. Kuwait airport is right on the other end of the list.

AirHelp, which is a startup that guides travelers applying for compensation after postponed, terminated or overbooked flights, based the ranking on the airport's Skytrax rating, punctuality data, and social media (where tweets were analyzed to determine if they are positive, neutral or negative).

This year, record number of travelers have been on the road and in the air globally, thus not all airports might be ready for such an influx, especially in the U.S.. Only one U.S. airline made the top 10 in the international airport ranking of AirHelp,

Cincinnati/Northern Kentucky Airport (CVG) outperformed others in the analysis, which evaluated 76 airports across the globe over a three-month duration focusing on the quality, service, punctuality of flights and analysis of more than 130,000 tweets.

Singapore Changi Airport took the top spot as the best airport with a general AirHelp Score of 9.07. The airport has been on the top of many best airports rankings and is well known for incredible engineering, efficient operation, and lavish enhancements.
