Benefits of Sleeping on Rails

Night train travel in Europe has many benefits. It's a great way to save time and money while also adding a little adventure to your journey. Instead of spending hours in the airport, you can board the train and wake up in a new city. Night trains also allow you to maximize your travel time by sleeping while you travel. This means you can spend more time exploring during the day and less time traveling.

Moreover, night train travel is an opportunity to meet new people. You'll be sharing a compartment or cabin with other travelers, which can be a great way to make new friends and exchange travel tips. Plus, many night trains have dining cars where you can grab a bite or drink with your fellow travelers.

Types of Night Trains in Europe

There are two main types of night trains in Europe: sleeper trains and couchette trains. Sleeper trains offer private cabins with beds, while couchette trains have shared compartments with bunk beds. Sleeper trains are more expensive but offer more privacy and comfort, while couchette trains are more budget-friendly but can be noisy and cramped.

Sleeper trains typically have three types of cabins: single, double, and triple. Single cabins are the most expensive but offer the most privacy, while triple cabins are the most budget-friendly but can be cramped. Double cabins are a good option for couples or friends traveling together.

Couchette trains usually include four or six bunk beds in a compartment. That's a superb option for those traveling with friends because, in this case, you can book an entire apartment! However, you'll share your apartment with others if you travel alone.

Choosing the Right Sleeping Accommodation

It goes without saying that if you travel by train your first and foremost task is to choose the right sleeping accommodation that will surely meet your needs. This is where a lot depends on your trip and your requirements. For example, if you travel alone, you should opt for a couchette train. However, if you value privacy, it will be better for you to choose a sleeper train. But in this case, you must pay attention to the cabin size. The thing is that single cabins are the best options, but they are also the most expensive ones. Double cabinets are suitable for couples or friends.

If you prefer a couchette train, you must pay attention to the number of bunks in the compartment. Four-bunk compartments are more spacious than six-bunk compartments, but they can also be more expensive. If you want to avoid inconveniences, you should follow these recommendations.
